Workshops

10:30 AM

The calling for discipleship and the role of mission education: This workshop is intended to demonstrate how with mission education we can provide discipleship to different age groups. For the younger generations it has the added benefit of promoting positive social interactions empowering children to avoid situations of bullying, harassment and intimidation. Adolescents and young adults experience discipleship by doing missions. Led by Ina Rios

Let My People Go: Fighting Human Trafficking by Loving those most vulnerable Kristyn and Hannah will lead a discussion on recognizing those that traffickers generally target and loving them as a church community. Part of the discussion will be sharing how LMPG can serve the local church. Led by Kristyn Davis and Hannah Garland

Relational Matters: The girl next door. The lady in the next cubical. The mom from the carpool. As women, we have many relationships and these relationships have the potential to become lifelong friends but how often do we miss out on these blessings by the distraction of life. Come learn how Christ challenges us to put relationships first and practical ways to fit that into even the busiest of schedules! Led by Christy Dyer

Upside Down Life: After thirty years (plus) on Manhattan's Lower East Side, Susan, her husband, and their church have found some principles of sharing God's kingdom that seem counter intuitive to the conventional wisdom that 'bigger is better.' Phrases like, 'Don't just do something, stand there,' and 'Small is big,' have proven to work in communities of need. "Meet the need first" is the motto of this ministry-based evangelism and church planting strategy." Led by Susan Field

Unscripted: In this conference we will discuss some practical ways to make disciples by sharing Christ with those we are around every day. We will glean some ideas from the book Unscripted by Jeff Iorg, which will encourage us to shake off stale evangelism techniques and to embrace a way of life that connects each of us with the spiritual power needed for effective witnessing and for building meaningful relationships through which our witness can flow.

A group on a mission: Ever thought taking a group of people on a mission sounded like fun but too much work for you? Come learn from a missionary how to plan an impactful, fun mission trip that will have lasting effects for God's kingdom. From picking a location, to logistical planning, this conference will be packed full of tips for success!
